Senators Suggest Roosevelt Tender His Peace Offices

Suggestion Seems Futile in View of Position of U. S., Britain

Washington, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Amid administration and congressional efforts to give more and more aid to Great Britain and Russia, two senators—Adams (D-Col.) and Nye (R-ND)—suggested today that President Roosevelt tender his good offices to bring about peace in Europe.

"I am one of the minority group which believes that the President might offer to help in bringing about peace," Adams told reporters.

"While Germany might say that we would be pretty poor peace-makers because of our aid to Britain, we could advise all the nations involved that we did not wish to dictate the treaty terms but merely would help in any way we could."

Unless peace does come in Europe, Adams said, it was possible that "the United States may find itself in a position where we will be fighting the whole world by ourselves."

Nye asserted that Roosevelt undoubtedly could "make a substantial contribution toward peace" and that "if our present foreign policy is followed to its ultimate end, we probably won't have a nation left in the world which is friendly to us."

Both Roosevelt and Prime Minister Churchill, however, have declared that their countries would not consent to any peace which involved a continuation of Hitlerism.

Plan Secret Hearing

With the new $5,985,000,000 lease-lend appropriation safely through the house, leaders turned their attention to hastening that aid-to-Britain measure through the senate and to obtaining prompt enactment of a neutrality revision bill permitting the arming of American merchant ships, as urged by Roosevelt.

Although a substantial number of congressmen favor broadening the armed-ship measure to eliminate the present prohibition against American ships traveling into belligerent ports or designated combat zones, the house foreign affairs committee voted last night to consider only the repeal of the section which forbids arming merchant ships, limit the hearing to two days, and hold them behind closed doors.

Rep. Tinkham (R-Mass.) called the action "outrageous" and "a complete nullification of democratic processes." The hearings will start Monday with Secretary of State Hull the first witness.

Originally, leaders had agreed that if the House gave overwhelming approval to arming ships, the senate might consider an amendment granting American merchant ships, limit the hearing to two days, and hold them behind closed doors.

Joliet High School's Superintendent Dies in Automobile Crash

Huntington, Ind., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Thomas M. Dean, 58, for the past 16 years superintendent of the Joliet, Ill., township high school and former principal of the Decatur, Ill., high school, was killed yesterday in an automobile accident near here.

Dean, who was driving to his farm near Ossian, Ind., to spend the week-end, collided with a car driven by Elmer Fultz of North Manchester and his car struck a bridge throwing him onto the pavement.

Memphis, Tenn., Oct. 11.—(AP)—County and railroad officials sought today to determine the cause of a train-school bus crash that cost seven lives at Eads depot, 20 miles east of here.

Dead are Charles F. Priddy, 55, veteran Shelby county school bus driver, and six elementary school pupils: Jean Seward, 12; Gus Anderson, Jr., 13; Hagan Austin Williams, Jr., 7; Alma Shirley, 7; Melvin Finish Richmond, 11, and Murray Kenneth Bryan, 9. Ten others were injured in the crash late yesterday.

The bus, carrying 18 children home from school, was struck broadside by an N. C. & St. L. passenger train.

A witness said the bus "came down the hill from the south, hesitated just a second—though I couldn't say whether it stopped or not—and then rolled out onto the track right in the path of the train."

Farm Federation Threatens Revolt Against Program

Washington, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Encouraged by rising farm prices and bigger incomes, an important group of farm leaders today threatened rebellion against any price ceilings and the present administration farm program.

They shouted approval late yesterday of resolutions in this direction after President Edward A. O'Neal led representatives of the American Farm Bureau Federation out of a two-day agricultural conference of representatives of 37 states. The conference had been called by Senator Thomas (D-Okla.).

The group, including agricultural commissioners of important farm states and representatives of other farm organizations, opposed any price maximums on farm products, asked freezing of government loan stocks on farm products, and demanded a new system of "parity prices" that would raise these present "fair exchange" levels.

Before walking out of the session, O'Neal said that the farm bureau could not support "a program of uncontrolled inflation and the fixing of minimum prices on all commodities, without control of production or marketing wherever necessary."

Texas Protestants

Other farm representatives, after the bureau men had departed, accused O'Neal of trying to "wreck this meeting" and shouted approval of a series of motions by Ralph W. Moore, former Master of the Texas State Grange.

Moore protested that while the

New State Law May Deprive Cities of Right to Establish Tavern Zone

Springfield, Ill., Oct. 11.—(AP)—The language of a new Illinois law prohibiting women from tending bars in taverns also may have deprived cities of their right to limit the sale of liquor to restricted zones.

This view was expressed by Frank R. Reid, Jr., corporation counsel of the city of Aurora, in a letter to Governor Green asking that the legislature restore the home rule provision at the earliest opportunity. Reid proposed that the subject be included if there is a special session of the legislature prior to the 1943 regular session.

Reid pointed out Aurora heretofore has restricted liquor sales to the central business district, but expressed doubt whether the limitation could be enforced under the state liquor law amendment which the general assembly enacted this year.

Senator Thomas E. Madden (D-Peoria) sponsored the bill amending the act so as to ban women bartenders. In the house, Rep. Ernest A. Greene offered an amendment to the Madden bill

14 CIO Unionists Found Guilty of Resisting Police

Indiana Jury Returns Verdict After Five Hours Deliberation

Winchester, Ind., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Leaders in the Congress of Industrial Organizations today pleaded a fight in Indiana's highest court to clear 14 men convicted of resisting police during a picketing fight in Richmond, Ind., in March.

A Randolph county circuit court jury, in a trial that began a month before to the day, returned its verdict last night after five hours' deliberation.

The 14 members of the C. I. O. Farm Equipment Workers Organizing Committee were convicted of resisting police officers who ran non-union workers past pickets March 27 to open a struck International Harvester plant. More than 20 persons were hurt in fighting.

Twenty-three other persons, including three women, were acquitted of the same charges. Only two of the convicted were from Richmond, the others from Chicago and Dayton, O.

The 11 farmers and a garage mechanic on the jury recommended $100 fines and costs for all 14 convicted; 90-day terms in Putnam State Penitentiary for the local union president, Clifford Kerr, 37, Richmond, and Organizer Robert Foley, 36, Chicago, and 60-day terms for 11 others.

Prosecutor Dave Dennis explained that the charge permitted the jurors either to convict the defendants of a misdemeanor or a felony. The jury could have recommended a one-year maximum term, by viewing the offense as a felony, but assessed the lesser penalty instead.

To Pass Sentence Oct. 20

Judge J. W. Macy said he would pass sentence Oct. 20.

Powers Haggood, C. I. O. Indiana regional director and chairman of the National Richmond Defense Committee, and Andrew Jacobs, defense attorney, both of Indianapolis, said an appeal would be taken to the Indiana Supreme court.

"We're going to fight to the limit," Haggood said, "to clear those men."

The plant, employing 1,165 men and women in production of dairy equipment and farm machinery parts, closed shortly afterward. The union voted to end the strike a few days after the plant was reopened.

House Votes Lease-Lend Appropriation Bill; Now in Senate

Early Action Promised on Huge Measure in Upper Chamber

Washington, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Bearing speedy and overwhelming house approval and minus any ban on aid to Russia, the new $5,985,000,000 lend-lease bill reached the senate today with promise of early action.

As in the house where the only major fight revolved around fruitless attempts to prohibit any of the fund being used to help the soviet government, the senate faced a similar controversy, but administration leaders expressed confidence the house action would be sustained.

The measure, bringing to $12,985,000,000 the appropriations for supplying war equipment and food to the nations resisting Hitler, passed the house late yesterday, 328 to 67, after only two days debate.

Two hundred thirty Democrats, 96 Republicans, one Farmer-Laborite and one American Laborite voted for the bill on final passage. Eight Democrats, 56 Republicans and three progressives voted no.

The no-aid-to-Russia amendment, offered by Rep. Rich (R-Pa.), lost on a standing vote 162 to 21, with most of the "aye" votes coming from the Republican side.

The huge bill went through without a change in the money sections as reported by the appropriations committee. Amendment after amendment seeking slashes in the sums allocated to various categories was easily rejected.

Senate Hearings Tuesday

Chairman Adams (D-Colo.) of the senate appropriations subcommittee which will handle the bill in that branch, said hearings would begin Tuesday and the bill would be reported by next week-end. The senate is expected to take it up the following Tuesday.

The bill appropriates:

- $1,875,000,000 for agricultural, industrial and other commodities.
- $1,190,000,000 for ordnance, armor and ammunition.
- $850,000,000 for ships, vessels and boats.
- $685,000,000 for aircraft, engines and parts.
- $385,000,000 for tanks, armored cars, automobiles, trucks and parts.
- $375,000,000 for facilities and equipment for manufacture of defense articles.
- $285,000,000 for necessary services and expenses.
- $175,000,000 for testing and re-pairing defense articles.
- $155,000,000 for miscellaneous military and naval equipment.
- $10,000,000 for administrative expenses.

Discharged Soldier in Court to Get Job Back

Chicago, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Suit was on file in federal court today by a discharged soldier who sought his former job under terms of the re-employment provision of the selective service act.

The suit by James E. Herbert, 28, office manager of the A. P. W. Paper Company from 1936 until his induction into the army, was the first action of its kind in this district. Herbert said he was given back his old job for a time but was discharged on Sept. 20. He said his employment was "purported employment and not genuine re-employment."

His suit asked for $5,520, which he estimated as his salary for one year as office manager. Herbert was released from the army after serving four months because of an amendment in the law permitting discharge of soldiers who had served four years in the navy.

Nazis' Drive Toward Moscow Is Reported Slowed by Red Star

Hundreds of Thousands of Russian Corpses Litter Battlefield

(By The Associated Press)

Great masses of Russian reserves, warmly dressed for winter action and bolstered by new tanks and fast planes, were reported moving up to the front today as Gen. Fedor von Bock's German armies pressed on over blood-soaked battlefields in a steadily growing threat to Moscow.

As the war ended its 16th week, the Russians appealed more urgently to Great Britain to create a diversion of invading western Europe. Thus Red Star, the soviet army newspaper, declared:

"Now the main forces of the German army are chained in the east, creating most favorable conditions for activation of other fronts (correct) of the anti-German coalition."

Afield, Russia's sorely-pressed armies fell back to a shorter defense front during the night and were reported to have slowed down the 10-day-old German drive on Moscow, but soviet dispatches admitted a grave new danger had arisen in the Vyazma sector, 125 miles west of the U. S. S. R. capital.

"The danger is great," said Red Star, conceding for the moment at least that the Germans had numerical superiority in the all-important conflict on the central front.

Thousands of Corpses

German reports asserted that hundreds of thousands of Russian corpses littered the battlefields around Bryansk, 220 miles southwest of Moscow.

Red troops attempting to escape encirclement by creeping through German lines at night were said to have been mowed down in great numbers.

A bulletin from Adolf Hitler's field headquarters reported that huge-scale slaughter of Russian forces trapped in the Bryansk and Vyazma sectors was proceeding rapidly, while on the southern (Ukraine) front, the high command said annihilation of soviet troops north of the Sea of Azov was approaching completion.

If true, this would pave the way for a direct German assault on the Don river port of Rostov, gateway to the vital Caucasian oil fields.

In the north, around Leningrad, the German high command said 11 Russian attempts to break out of the old czarist capital failed yesterday and that 28 super-heavy soviet tanks were destroyed in three days of fighting.

Intensifying Mounting

Soviet front-line dispatches said the bloody struggle on the central front was mounting in intensity, with fresh German divisions attacking incessantly in three main sectors—Vyazma, Bryansk, and Orel, 220 miles south of Moscow.

Unconfirmed Berlin reports said the Germans were also driving on the Volga river city, of Rzhev, 135 miles northwest of Moscow, and had captured Tula railway junction, 105 miles due south of the soviet capital—thus drawing a complete half circle around Moscow.

Thousands of Red army reserves were reported moving up to the front in a steady stream, but the Russians made no attempt to conceal the darkness of the hour.

After initial success in stemming German attacks around Vyazma, inflicting heavy losses on the invaders, the Russians conceded their lines had been torn by deep wedges in that defense zone.

"Campaign Goes On"

German newspapers told the people that the men at the front would not be home this winter, which seemed to indicate that Hitler's description of the Moscow offensive as "the last great, decisive battle this year" did not mean an end to the war with Russia.

The Alabama Drydock & Shipbuilding Company of Mobile, Ala., will build 36 of the ships and 13 will be constructed by the Bethlehem Steel Company at Sparrows Point, Md. Will Recover

Chicago, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Frank Dubbell, 56, says he doesn't remember much what happened after he lost his balance while standing on a chair.

The police theory was that Dubbell put a chair on his bed and climbed on it to reach a box on a shelf. He lost his balance, crashed through a window and screen, nosedived two stories, smashed against a fence and landed on a pile of bricks in the adjoining yard. Doctors said he would recover.

The War Today!

(Telegraph Special Service)

(This Daily Feature, Conducted by DeWitt MacKenzie, is Written Today by Fred Vanderschmidt.)

It is entirely likely that any trial armistice balloons which Adolf Hitler has wafted toward Russia in the course of his Moscow offensive were merely oblique harbingers of new attempts to make a peace with Britain before the winter snows blanket the battle dead in the east.

Hitler wants extermination of the Red armies and complete conquest of Russia-in-Europe, not compromise. It is only necessary to fit his own sentences together to realize that he is willing to give the British a peace offer which, on paper, might look fairly attractive.

Eight days ago Hitler chose to say again that he did not blame the bulk of the English people for the war, only Churchill. "His co-agitators" and "international Jewry." The day before he made that speech he told his troops (as it later was disclosed for propaganda purposes) that they could win "the most essential condition for peace" if they smashed Russia in the decisive battle then beginning.

Subsequently, in a cascade of proclamations, Hitler had his underlings shout to the world that the battle with Russia was won. Actually, developments of the last few days prove that was not true. This morning, the Germans have to say, in effect, that they are still about the business of winning it.

It is, therefore, difficult to escape the conclusion that Hitler is conducting a deliberate and grandiose campaign to make the people of Britain (and those of America, too) believe that there is no use trying to sustain Russia any more and that it would be better to patch things up before the Germans, fattened by the wealth of all Europe, turn west with all their remaining men, planes and guns.

But this, according to the most reliable indications, is not going to work.

First: Hitler does not know the people of Britain, never did, never will. Second: The British and American statesmen who were in Moscow, even while the great German offensive was raging, have returned convinced that Russia is not licked and determined not only to provide Russia with supplies but to keep open a way by which they may reach the Red armies.

The British themselves appear to be preparing action as an answer to Hitler. This is not likely to take the form of a general western offensive stab at the continent; Britain has neither the ships nor the arms for that, although punishing raids on the French, Dutch or Belgian coasts by the new command corps of tough Tommies, trained in everything from the Australian crawl to Japanese jiu jitsu, would not be surprising.

There may also be a tip in the recent lull in heavy bombing of Germany by the RAF, broken last night by a big raid on the Ruhr.

Nation's Expanding Defense Machine Is Big Holding Company

Includes 25 Emergency, Permanent Alphabetical Sub-Agencies

Washington, Oct. 11.—(AP)—Like a giant holding company with policy-making and planning companies at the top and a host of operating units underneath to carry out orders—that's the nation's ever-expanding defense machine.

President Roosevelt is the one-man top holding company. His orders go forth through a variety of subordinate holding companies and interlocking directorates down to the operating agencies. When he does not do his own ordering, he delegates others to take over authority.

All told, there are about 25 permanent and emergency agencies in the gigantic machine—an alphabetical line-up never dreamed of in early new deal days.

All of these agencies for all practical purposes are directly under the executive office of the president. About half of them are technically under the office of Emergency Management (OEM), another White House adjunct, but this agency serves merely as a liaison or coordinator between the president and a dozen emergency defense agencies.

With Wayne Coy, a young Indian in charge, OEM funnels information back and forth to save the president a lot of detail paper and telephone work. One of its more recent jobs was to handle an exchange of letters between the president and OPM and the Federal Power Commission concerning a national daylight savings law.

Important Cogs

Aside from the armed services and other regular departments and agencies, the most important cogs in the defense machine are the Lend-Lease Administration (LLA), Supply, Priorities, and Allocations Board (SPAB), Economic Board (EDB), Office of Production Management (OPM), and Office of Price Administration (OPA).

Harry L. Hopkins is the big boss of LLA, yet to be formally created as such. He is officially known as special assistant to the president.

Building Improvements

SMALL HOMES • STORES • APARTMENTS • MODERNIZATION

by PAUL T. HAAGEN, A.I.A.

WHAT PEOPLE WISH IN THEIR HOMES

Recently there has been a contest in which more than 10,000 plans were submitted and which revealed certain facts that prospective home owners wished incorporated in their homes. They are as follows:

Young couples and older folks desire small compact homes easy and economical to maintain and operate.

People in middle life where the family is developing, require larger homes with more complete accommodations.

An extra room that may be used for a guest room or for other purposes is desirable on the first floor.

People do not like the entrance to enter directly into the living room. They prefer a vestibule or small hall.

The saving of steps is important. Thus, the travel from the kitchen to the front door and from room to room should be as short as possible.

The attached garage is desirable and should be accessible without going through any service rooms.

Home owners wish two bathrooms or one bath and lavatory if the house has more than three bedrooms.

A dining room on the plan so arranged that a part of the living room may be used as a dining portion.

Most homes are without servants and modern kitchens equipment solves more work that goes on in the modern house. The kitchen should be well equipped.

The laundry should be well lighted and well furnished and may be in the basement, but preferably on the ground floor so steps may be saved while carrying on the laundry work.

Ample closet facilities. Drying rooms are desirable but not required.

Special storage spaces for toys, sport equipment, etc.

Automatic heating device systems.

tem with air conditioning are desirable. They may be stoker, oil or gas heating systems. Air conditioning in the simplest form which consists of circulation, air cleaning and winter humidification is desirable.

Plenty of electric outlets. The above items should be considered in building a home and the ones that particularly apply to your requirements should be incorporated in your home.

CHIMNEY AND FLUES

The chimney and flue of your heating plant or fireplace is so important from the standpoint of its draft and the efficient operation of the plant itself that it is essential when building or remodeling your house that the proper flue size and height of the chimney be definitely determined by some one who knows the requirements and how to estimate the sizes.

It would seem that a dirty chimney would not draw well, and so it is important in the fall to see that the chimneys are well cleaned and all open joints in the masonry that may have shown up in the last few months be filled up and completely sealed with mortar.

The chimney cap should be gone over, because if there is a broken cap the water is likely to seep through the crack into the brickwork below and when the frost comes, freezing will take place and the brickwork damaged.

Chimneys should be as straight as possible, and if there is a necessity to offset the chimney, the slope or slant should be quite gradual.

All chimneys would be better if lined with a terra cotta flue lining of the proper size of which there are several standard sizes.

A clean-out door at the bottom of the chimney is recommended. It should be placed just above the basement floor, or if there is no basement, above the grade and so it may be reached from the outside.

It is better to have one flue serve only one heating device. Two or three openings on a flue destroy the draft and where a hot water heater or fireplace is used, it is better to have a separate flue for each.

Chimneys that are built within a house seem to draw better and a certain amount of heat is given off through the brickwork of the chimney and will throw some heat into the house. Where the chimney is placed on an outside wall the draft is not always so good, and some heat is lost.

CREOSOTE LUMBER BELOW GRADE

The posts for pier foundations or all other lumber used in the ground, should be thoroughly soaked in creosote before they are placed in the ground. This treatment will prevent decay and destruction of the wood by insects.

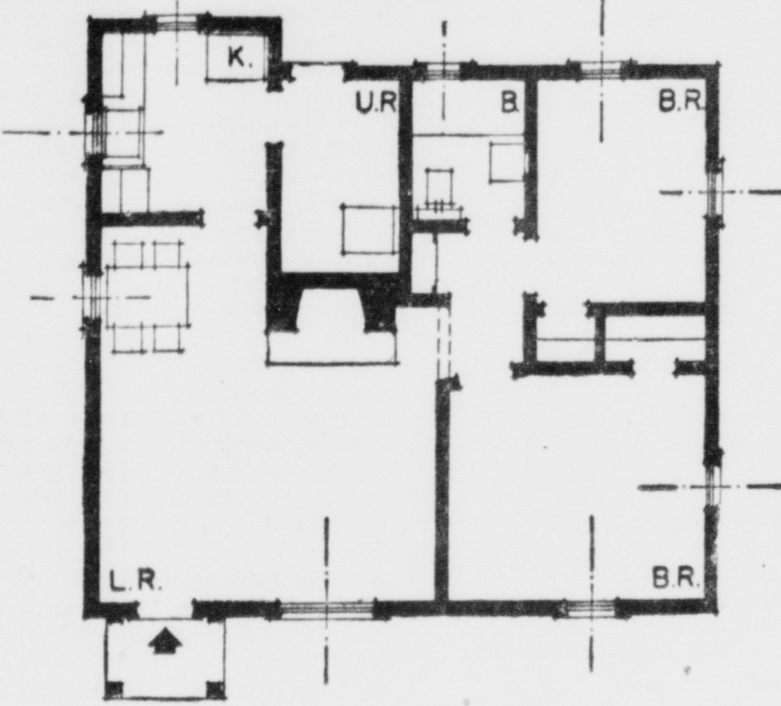

CRACKS AT BATH TUB

In order to avoid cracking of the plaster or tile where they meet the bath tub, there is on the market a steel angle which is screwed to the studs and holds the weight of the tub. This overcomes in a great measure the crack that would ordinarily develop at that point.

Simplicity Marks Attractiveness of This Small Home

Simplicity is the keynote of this small two-bedroom house. In avoiding needless architectural detail, the builders of this house have achieved what many in the past have sought—a low-cost cottage of beauty and dignity. This property is located in the Midwest, where it was given a valuation of $3,800 and was financed with a mortgage of $3,200 insured by the Federal Housing Administration. Monthly payments on a 25-year mortgage of this amount total less than $19 exclusive of local taxes and hazard insurance. The price will vary in other localities.

HOME COSTS WILL RISE

If one is considering building a house, the prices of today are as low as they will be for some years. This is the opinion of most home building authorities throughout the United States.

While home building costs are higher than they were, there is still time for the prospective home owner to build at lower costs than will prevail in the next few years. There are three facts that determine the cost of a home. First, the cost of the land; second, the cost of the material; and third, the assembly or labor cost.

The trend today is away from the large cities and centers to suburban country life. This tends to strengthen the cost of the land.

There are no prospects that material costs will decline because there seems to be a large building boom in prospect. Already the first half of 1941 shows a larger number of private homes built throughout the United States than at any time during the last seven years.

Labor is a large factor in the cost of a home and there are no indications of any changes in labor costs for years to come, because the drawing of labor into the national defense programs will continue and labor is becoming scarce.

Yet, with all of these rising items, there are certain economy factors that prevail in the constructing cost of the small house today. First, and most important, is the low cost of financing which is lower than ever before.

Second, the increasing mass production methods in construction. Third, the use of prefabricated items in the house, such as windows, cabinets, etc., that are completely made ready to slip into the house as desired. These factors keep the cost somewhere near level.

LEAKING BASEMENT WALLS

Sometimes leaks occur at the point between the wall and the concrete floor. This comes from the collection of water under the cellar floor which because of the water pressure, forces the water to leak through the joint.

Water may be kept away from walls and basement floor by building a drain tile on top of the footing outside of the wall and discharging the water from the drain tile to a lower point. There is another method and that is to excavate a pit in one portion of the basement where the water may collect and then install an automatic sump pump that will discharge the water to a lower level outside the walls.

Basement Recreation Rooms

The recreation room whether it be in the basement, in an attic or just a room somewhere within the house that has been set aside for recreation purposes is a needed room in families where the children are growing up and where they may entertain their friends, carry on games and be away from the older folks with the consequent result that the household is not disrupted.

The basement is probably the most usual location for this room, for the basement in the newer houses is today very unlike the older basements where dirty, cumbersome heating plants and coal storage littered up almost the entire basement, and left little place for other uses.

But the heating plants of today, be they stoker fired coal furnaces, oil or gas fired units are an altogether different matter for you find the newer heating plants smaller, more compact, neat fine equipment which permits the use of the basement for other purposes.

When you build your house, see to it that the heating plant and the laundry equipment is placed in one section of the basement so that most of the basement room is released for a recreation room.

It is desirable to have the walls finished in a light material. They may be painted directly onto the foundation walls, or ceiled with one of the wall boards or more elaborately decorated with pine planks. Floors will probably be of concrete which may be painted any desired color and then waxed. Ceilings are best plastered and then decorated.

Have plenty of base plugs and plenty of ceiling lights and if a ping pong table is desired, arrange for light over the table.

A fireplace is a nicety, and here steaks may be broiled and gatherings about the open fire in winter will be a real joy.

If you can have a sink of running water in some place in the room do so. It may be hidden by a screen, but will be a real step saver and a great convenience.

WEATHER-STRIPS

Right now, before the weather gets too bad, is the time to get ready for winter. One of the essential items to look after for almost every house is the windows and doors, and the reconditioning of the same.

Winds blow and cold strikes through, and so weather strips or storm sash or both will greatly help in reducing fuel bills and make your home more comfortable this coming winter.

Drafts and dust drive through between the window sash and the frame, and this may be stopped by weather strips which also keeps the sash from rattling.

There are many types of weatherstrips on the market. They vary in price and types, but all will do a good job for varying conditions.

Thresholds of doors should also be weatherstripped so that driving rains will not leak through. Storm doors and storm sash fill a real want in the small home. They are available in many stock sizes and may be installed in almost every case at little cost. They will pay for themselves in a very few years in the savings made in fuel alone, to say nothing of the added comfort of a snug draftless home.

The heat loss through glass is great, and so with the extra glass of the storm sash and the air space between the two glass panes the heat is saved.

It is advisable to have ventilators in the lower style of the storm sash so ventilation may be had without raising or thrusting out the sash itself. Hardware is standard for hanging the sash so that the sash may be partly opened and held tightly in place when more ventilation is needed.

BASEMENT RECREATION ROOM

The basement recreation room or rumpus room has many advantages, for a properly installed room of this type will keep the rest of the house undisturbed by the chatter and cheers of the game and the upset condition caused in a room when playing. Also the feeling of comparative isolation and freedom from restraints will make basement parties particularly carefree.

The hostess also appreciates a recreation room because when the last guest leaves there is no immediate necessity for a clean-up at that late hour. It really doesn't matter that the furniture may have been disturbed or disarranged and that ashes are on the floor.

The recreation room takes a lot of punishment and comes back for more repeatedly.

Telegraph Photo

The Arthur E. Blochers of Amboy began collecting cacti in 1933, and their garden now contains more than 400 of the reported 1,600 varieties. Represented are specimens from Old Mexico, Puerto Rico, Central America, South America, Africa, as well as arid regions of this country. Nearly 1,200 visitors, representing 21 states and the District of Columbia, visited the garden during the past season. Removal of the collection to winter quarters at Henry, Ill., is expected to be completed within a day or so.

Cactus Garden Is Hobby of Amboy Couple; Collection Is Huge and Still Growing

By LOIS J. STIMELING

They don't seem to have the attributes to inspire that "take me home with you" instinct. In fact, they look more intent upon conveying the threat: "I dare you to come near me."

Yet, did you ever hear of anyone who crossed the desert by automobile and didn't stop to dig up at least one cactus?

Most of these prickly bundles of plant life (if they are granted space in the car until the travelers reach home) find themselves shunted about from one place to another and finally forgotten, after members of the household have suffered injuries to both fingers and dispositions.

But not all cacti meet such a fate. For some plant lovers, these peculiar little opuntiacae (cacti to you) have a deep fascination, aroused probably by their indomitable spirit, which makes them go on living in the desert in the face of seemingly insurmountable odds, one of which is lack of water for some 11 months of the year.

A Lee county resident who is truly interested in cacti is Arthur E. Blocher of Amboy, music instructor in the Lamolite, Putnam, Sparland, Rutland, and Benson schools. Raising and tending these natives of arid regions has developed into an enjoyable hobby for him, as well as for Mrs. Blocher and his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Blocher.

Began in '33
The Arthur Blochers have been collecting cacti since 1933, and their garden now contains specimens of some 400 of the reported 1,600 varieties. They are adding to their collection continually—not only through their own travels and purchases, but also as the result of eagerness of traveling friends to lend their assistance.

The Blochers had long been lovers of flowers when they visited the Century of Progress exposition in Chicago in 1933. "We practically lived at the Arizona building," Mr. Blocher told a Telegraph reporter in a recent interview, "and when they started selling the cacti collection on the last day, we bought several." Two of those original plants are still a part of the couple's present collection, which contains specimens from Old Mexico, Puerto Rico, Central America, South America, and arid regions of this country, including New Mexico, Texas, cactus attracts particular interest, as the appendages don't take the form of thorns, but are more like a mass of coarse white hair, swirling itself about the spherical pad of the plant.

The Old Man is one of 36 or more varieties seen in the Old Mexico group, which also includes the snake cactus, a night-bloomer, producing fragrant blossoms as large as saucers; golden balls, yellow spheres that stand with fixed bayonets, no matter from which side one approaches; the recently-discovered totem pole, a spineless specimen; golden stars and golden lace; a sea urchin, resembling, as the name implies, shells on the sea shore; bishop's cap, a "best bloomer"; pipe organ, a cactus that is planted side by side in some areas to form a fence, and many others.

"Miscellaneous" is the group "title" for the second plot we investigated. This collection, consisting of about 30 varieties, came from Utah, Colorado, Puerto Rico, and Central America.

Of particular interest to feminine visitors is the lipstick cactus of that group. The cochineal bug, Mr. Blocher explains, feeds on this plant, and 70,000 of the minute insects can be converted into about one pound of dye.

The claret cup of the miscellaneous group, producing a claret-red blossom, comes from Colorado, and the devil's thorn, studded with formidable spines, is found in Puerto Rico. The spines of the latter fall at the slightest touch, and wherever they alight, take a firm grip that only pliers can loosen.

A third group, of about 60 varieties, comes from South America, and was secured through exchange with other collectors. Most of these plants bloom at night, and among the most unusual is the Peruvian apple. It produces a large red fruit that is highly prized for food by the natives. (Mr. Blocher has eaten these, and says they taste much like watermelon, except for being more tart).

Nearby is a peanut cactus; a specimen of Joseph's coat, boasting a variety of green tones; Old Man of the Andes, a wild and wooly-looking importation from Brazil; a seliniceus, or moon cactus, whose pure white blossoms measure as large as 14 inches in diameter; the rattlesnake, a striped plant that bloomed profusely all summer; and silver torch, a beautiful variety usually found in Bolivia.

Texas Group
A fourth plot contains the strawberry cactus, producing tunas, or fruit, that is peeled and eaten with sugar in west Texas; deer's tongue; horse creeper; a rugged variety with spines so strong that they are capable of crippling horses; gray, brown and white lace; dry whisky, which the Indians chew during their ceremonies; melon, button, and lead pencil varieties; and blind pear of the Big Bend, from west Texas. (The high content of anna-line in the dry whisky cactus cures visions of beautiful colors, dancers, butterflies, and a terrific headache—to its users, according to adventurous scientists. Mr. Blocher says.) More than 100 species of cacti are to be found in the state of Texas alone.

Still another group, from Africa, is composed of the five-pointed star; cow horn, with spikes resembling pairs of cow horns; an euphorbia, whose milky juice was once used by the natives to poison death-dealing

LOOK AHEAD to 1942

One thing is certain. There are going to be more taxes and higher taxes for everyone.

Wouldn't it be smart to prepare for them now in order to ease this burden when March 15, 1942 rolls around?

Here's our suggestion. Save something every month in a special fund for next year's income tax. You still have plenty of time and we'll help you get started.

A Thought for Today

But he that doth wrong shall receive

there is no respect of persons.—Colossians
3:25.

There is need a God that hears and sees what'er we do.—Plautus.

Nothing Inevitable, Even That Slump

Nothing is less certain to happen than the inevitable.

That's a trick phrase, of course. What's meant is "the inevitable." In short, just about the time men together and say "This is inevitable," something else happens.

It may well be that way with the post-war slump. Some men are so sure of it that they positively revel in gloomy head-shakings, they wallow in grim forebodings of "Oh, what a crash there's going to be when this is all over!"

It all seems so logical; the defense plants suddenly shut down; a couple of million men come streaming back from the army; the plug is pulled on unlimited federal spending and down we all go in one great resounding crash that would make 1929 look like a feather-duster dropping off a footstool. It's the fact that everybody's expecting such a crash that first led us to think that maybe it won't happen. Everybody has been wrong so often.

One reassuring thing is that so many people are already thinking about ways to avoid that "inevitable" crash. Chairman Sloan of General Motors is only one big-time executive who has every department of his plant already intent on studying what may be done with new productive facilities after the defense emergency has passed. Many other executives have their eye on the same problem.

Similarly, many planning agencies and individuals interested in creating better living conditions, are already plotting out future needs. The Architectural Forum has set up a panel of 200 advisers to see what planning, zoning, design, construction, financing, taxation, and building may contribute to keep production rolling against any "post-war slump."

They have found, for instance, that by 1945 the 10 billion dollars worth of commercial construction of the Twenties will be 20 years old and ready for modernization. By 1945, a third of all the 40 million dwelling units in the country will be more than 50 years old. By 1945, six million of those dwelling units will be unfit for use, and 18 million will call either for major reconstruction or replacement.

The need for a vast post-war construction program in many fields is already evident. This does not necessarily imply that it will all have to be done by public funds. The more study is made now of means of attracting private capital into construction, the better chance there is of attracting it promptly when the time comes.

The more thought directed now against this "inevitable" slump, the less inevitable it becomes.

Peace Has Its Victories

In the midst of the din of perhaps the most titanic war of all time, peace timidly steps up to register a small victory.

Yet who shall say it is a small victory when Argentina, Brazil, the United States and other American nations peacefully persuade Ecuador and Peru to conclude an armistice in their border war, each withdrawing troops from the disputed area pending negotiations for more permanent settlement?

In any time, such an achievement is not negligible. In times like these, such a victory for peace, small though it is in the face of terrible World War II, is perhaps even greater than it would be in normal times. It shines like Shakespeare's little candle, "a good deed in a naughty world." Yet it is from just such tiny flickers of light that great beacons are kindled.

Knowledge, Power, and Victory

Down in that far corner of the world that lies between India and the Mediterranean, between the Caspian and Arabian Seas, the winning of World War II may be at stake. Most Americans know next to nothing of these lands, which were the cradles of civilized man. Now they may be his.

But in Britain they know about those far places. Stuffed away on the shelves of the stuffier London clubs are the forgotten books written by travelers of this restless race: "Six Months with the Dzhigur of Brander" or "Tenting in Tabriz with the Sheikh Hadji Dinar." We laughed at those ponderous travel books when they penetrated to America. But now it is shown that perhaps they were not so vain; their writers were exploring the odd corners of the world in which the World War II may now go to a decision. The better ones, like Doughty and Lawrence and Bell, amassed knowledge now being translated by the British army into terms of power, perhaps into ultimate victory.

The Other Side of Inflation

It is quite certain that it is desirable and necessary to slam down the inflation brakes. Inflation is a condition in which the available supply of money outruns the production of goods on which it may be spent; with more dollars bidding for the restricted stock of goods, prices rise, money loses its value, and the spiral speeds toward chaos. Efforts are now being made, through taxation and the Defense Bond drive, to cut down on the available money supply.

But there is another approach. Every effort ought to be made to increase production of such materials as do not conflict with defense. There is a tremendous carry-over of cotton, for instance. The more cotton goods of all kinds that are produced, the more sales offerings there are to match the money floating around. That is the other side of inflation-control—to produce more of every kind of goods that can be produced without hampering the defense effort.

New Yorker who turned in a false alarm told police he had no home. They gave him one—for 30 days.

SERIAL STORY

MURDER IN PARADISE

BY MARGUERITE GAHAGAN

COPYRIGHT, 1941,
NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Mary O'Connor wanders at the strange circumstances at Paradise Lake, where she and her spirited mother Maudie are vacationing, that have brought reporter Dennis Flynn to the scene. Herbert Cord, sophisticated who has been carrying on a summer flirtation with young Jeanie Morris for two years, is murdered. Maudie Dixon, a well-to-do woman, is suspected of the murder of a man she despised. Mary, Denny, and Tod Palmer, local editor, all feel that Maudie knows more than she is revealing.

TOD PALMER'S BOMBSHELL

CHAPTER VI

WE tried with flattery and threats to make Maudie tell us why she was so convinced that Herbert Cord was not the victim of the numbers boys, but she refused.

"I suppose you know the Morris-isses," Maudie said in that friendly, gossiping way that meant the other conversation was definitely at an end.

From the way the boy's face flushed, we could gather that he knew one of them at least. Maudie brightened up at once, and I could see her mind grasping at the romantic possibilities.

"Jeanie is certainly a sweet child," she said. Tod's hands fumbled awkwardly for a cigarette, but he managed to agree. He said he'd known her for some time, but it wasn't until this summer when he was back home to stay that he had really had a chance to get acquainted again.

"I suppose your father knew everyone in his day," Maudie said, walking toward the door with him. "But the old-timers go, Miss Morris and that man at the inn, Chris Gordon, I guess they must be about the two oldest residents around these parts."

Tod said he guessed so, too. His father used to talk about the days when Miss Millie was young and pretty, and Chris Gordon had been there running the little inn.

"Young and pretty—well, I suppose Miss Morris might have been once, only it seems hard to believe," Maudie added.

"Oh, Miss Millie's all right when you get to know her," the boy said.

"Yes, I enjoyed talking with her—even though the occasion wasn't the best one could wish for. She's a woman of convictions, I'd say."

"My father said she had the longest memory of anyone he knew, and heaven help the person she didn't like. But she was loyal to her friends, he used to say. You know Liza Holmes, that old scarecrow of a housekeeper, has been there for years. No one but Miss Millie would ever keep such a domineering old sorcerer around the house. But Miss Millie's always had her there and I suppose she always will."

TOD finally got away. After some more and had been invited to make our cottage his headquarters while on the story, he, too, started out again.

When he had left I felt that emptiness within me. It looked as though I was right back where I was a year ago, and I wished I'd never seen his funny face.

Maudie looked forward to the inquest with an enthusiasm that wasn't decent. I don't know what sort of fireworks she expected, but as far as I was concerned the proceedings were anything but pleasant. Not that my part or Maudie's was bad, for the questions they asked us were purely routine, but Jeanie hauled up there. The quarrel in the inn and the plans for the picnic were enough to cause the authorities to feel that Jeanie might be able to throw some light on the affair.

She handled herself well, answering the questions in a distinct, quiet voice that wasn't in harmony with the paleness of her face or the distraught look in her blue eyes. She admitted she had known Herbert Cord well—very well for several years.

"After the conversation between you three in the inn, what did you do, Miss Morris?" asked Fred Underwood, the assistant coroner.

"Do—?" she repeated. "Why, I went home."

Margie Dixon, already taking advantage of her bereavement by wearing a black silk dress that did things to her curves and a black affair of velvet and feathers that passed as a hat and brought out her green eyes, sat upright in her chair and stared at the girl.

"Immediately, Miss Morris? This conversation took place about 9:30 in the evening, didn't it?" Underwood asked. "If you went home at once you would have reached the residence of your aunt about 9:45, wouldn't you?"

JEANIE hesitated a second. She looked so young, so unprepared for the questions that were coming, that I wished I could just leave and miss the whole wretched business. She looked at her white gloves and smoothed the stitching on the backs of them. "Yes," she admitted, "it would take about 15 minutes, I guess."

"But at 10:30 that evening you were seen in Echo Grove going toward your home. You admit that, don't you, Miss Morris?"

I could hear Maudie's breath come out in a little sigh and I must confess I felt the same way. The web was being spun. Clews, motives, suspects. . . . Sitting there in the makeshift witness box, Jeanie certainly didn't appear the type to have shot a man. In her little dark blue linen suit with its white collar and cuffs, and her father's straw hat turned up all around like a child's, she gave the impression of innocence, if I was any judge. But I wasn't, and so the business continued. Jeanie Morris was paler than before.

"I stopped on the way home." Her voice wasn't quite so steady now, but she still retained her dignity. "I—I met someone and we visited for a few minutes."

We all sat there awaiting the next question. I could see Miss Millie two seats away from me, watching her niece with an expressionless face.

Dressed in that rusty black gown of a bygone era, Miss Millie added the finishing touch to the room. Maudie was breathing faster now than ever and I knew she wished now that she hadn't worn that new corset.

Denny Flynn was sitting up in front taking notes occasionally, but most of the time just watching people. Once he looked at me and his eyebrows went up into those little triangles as he smiled. My heart went into a silly flutter.

THE assistant coroner stood looking at the girl as though framing his next question. Who she was with was what everyone wanted to know. And the general feeling was that she would name Herbert Cord.

One could easily imagine where that would carry her in the minds of the jurors sitting to determine how this man had met his death and by whose hand. A quarrel there, and a bitter parting and then the girl's pursuit down the half-mile stretch of road with more angry reproaches until the end, with his body sprawled on the bed of mud in the moon-bathed woods.

Time seemed to stand still while we sat there waiting and then came the first bombshell. But it was one that made Maudie and me lean back in our hard, uncomfortable chairs and relax with relief. It came when young Tod Palmer, sitting next to Denny with some sheets of copy paper clutched in his hands, stood up.

"I should like to say, sir, that Miss Morris was with me during that time."

Hugh S. Johnson Writes From Capital During
Mallon's Illness

By HUGH S. JOHNSON
(Distributed by King Features

Washington, D. C., Oct. 11—There is a good deal of cock-eyed stuff still floating over the price-control declarations. Representative Vinson wants to limit profits to 7 per cent of manufacturing cost on defense contracts whether or not with the United States. Mr. Vinson has conducted and will continue to conduct an investigation into all the defense costs and profits. Thus far he has found some perfectly outrageous percentages of profit—274 per cent in one case.

What he is doing in the way of investigation is one of the healthiest and most necessary moves we could make. Reports of our defense effort have been made mostly in dollars, and while it can't be said that they don't mean a thing, it can be said that they are very deceptive.

We already know that in the case of building cantonments costs mounted far out of line with any precedent or reason. There is a good reason to believe that we are getting pitifully little per ton of munitions for the dollars that we spend, and that Hitler probably gets three to four times as much for his armament money as we get for ours.

This of itself is one of our greatest inflationary threats—not to mention the fact that there must be some bottom to Uncle Sam's sock and that we could defeat ourselves on this front alone if somebody doesn't pay some attention to what we are getting for our money.

Mr. Vinson apparently proposes to pay a great deal of attention. Let us thank heaven for that.

But this business of "cost plus a percentage of profit" is old and deadly stuff. It was our curse in World War one. As a result we adopted a little less vicious formula—"cost plus a fixed fee."

Here is the difference. If your profit depends, as it does in ordinary competitive commercial life, on costs as low as you get them, you are not apt to go out like a drunken sailor and squander as much as you can to produce an article. You will try to produce it as cheaply as competitive conditions will permit. But if you are relieved from all care and responsibility about that and because of a fixed percentage based on costs as the measure of your profits, you not only have no incentive to reduce costs. You have a powerful incentive to push them up because the higher they go, the greater is your profit.

This is not merely theoretical. It stands to reason in human nature and it was amply demonstrated by experience in 1917 and 1918.

The "cost plus a fixed fee" alternative now more generally used didn't altogether remove these evils because it still left the contractor with small responsibility for rising costs but, at least, it did not encourage him to boost costs as does the "cost plus a percentage of cost" rule.

It is a difficult and complex problem. But as types and manufacturing costs become more standardized and especially if we can get price and wage control legislation so that a manufacturer can plan his costs with intelligence, perhaps we can go back to the old competitive system in awarding contracts and then go in with some kind of intelligent corporation tax bill and eliminate all exorbitant profits due to war. But let's not go back to the proved failure of cost plus a percentage of profit.

MICHIGAN VS. PITTSBURGH

Ann Arbor, Mich., Oct. 11.—(AP)—Michigan's undefeated Wolverines opened a football rivalry with the once-mighty Pittsburgh Panthers, heir-apparent to a Western Conference membership, before a crowd of about 30,000 today.

Purdue, the Panthers pinned their hopes on two triple-threat halfbacks with limited experience, Bill Dutton and Jack Stetler, because of an injury to Edgar (Special Delivery) Jones, the team's leading ground gainer last year.

Two sophomores, Halback Tom Kuzma and Guard Melvin Pregulman, started for Michigan, 7 to 5 favorite.

With the rest of the conference word going to it tooth and nail around them, the Dixon Dukes abandoned their isolationist policy last night, amended their neutrality act and decided to arm their ship of state. The first gun fire was the 6 to 0 victory over the Mendota team here—and one lone torpedo found its mark to sink the visiting crew into the troubled North Central conference seas.

The "V for Victory" campaign caught on at last with the Dukes and they are no longer the oppressed of the circuit as they threw a ring of tough pigskin leather around their foe with the cry of "They shall not pass." The conquest ended the locals' string of defeats and from now on the tide of battle should be turned.

Against a team which is rated as one of the best in these parts because of its strong line, the Dukes played well and with spirit. Although the statistics showed they should have defeated Mendota by at least one more touchdown, and although they threatened the visitors' goal on several occasions, they have caught on at last and should feel the importance of the season ahead. All is not yet lost.

Heavy Mendota Line

Mendota, with a line reported to average 190 pounds, has a fine team with a clever and fast backfield. That Dixon defeated Mendota only proves the point that the locals—small and slow 'though they be—are a better team than the previous season record would indicate.

Their cleverness found holes in the massive Mendota line and that touchdown play when Quilhot took the ball and went untouchdowned center on a delayed buck shows that sometimes brains pay off when brawn is lacking.

Dixon outplayed Mendota in every department. The Dukes outgained the visitors 263 to 139 in net yardage and made a total of 17 first downs to five by Mendota.

Passes over the line from Egler to Shank, magnificent field running by Quilhot and a peppery line did the trick. It was only the fault of a penalty which prevented the Dukes from scoring again in the last quarter. The fact that Mendota held them on another threat in the books as a credit to the superior line of the Dewitzmen.

Victory March

The victory march began early in the first quarter. After the Dukes kicked off to Mendota a series of line plunges and runs in which Edwards was the principal ball-carrier failed and after his punt the locals began a drive from the Mendota 62 yard line.

On the first play Joynst went through right guard and tackle to the 25 for a first down. Egler swept the right side of his line for four more yards and from the 21-yard line Quilhot took the ball from Egler on a line buck and smashed through center untouchdowned to the pay dirt. Weaver attempted place-kick for the extra point failed.

After the kickoff Mendota took the ball on the 21-yard line and Faber went through tackle for three yards. Faber picked up another tee and then on Edwards' quick kick Hink fumbled and Mendota's Wagner recovered on the Dixon 44.

Edwards' line plunges only brought loss of yardage on the first plays until a pass from Edwards to Wagner was good for nine yards. Faber tried the center of the line for no gain and Edwards' pass to Pederson was incomplete.

Dixon took over on the 35 yard line and on the first place Egler was thrown for a 10-yard loss before his pass over the line to Shank was good for a first down to the Dixon 48.

Joynst's line buck, a pass from Egler to Shank and Joynst's left side run all failed and Egler punted out of bounds on the Mendota 9-yard stripe.

Edwards picked up a yard before Evans tackled him and Faber cut through center for two more. Edwards punted to Egler who was downed on the Mendota 35.

Penalty on Dixon

Dixon suffered a 15-yard penalty for pushing and Egler's pass to Shank was ruled complete by interference for a first down. Egler was tossed for a 15-yard loss as he tried the end of the line and Weidman lost 5 more yards to Yost of Mendota in on both tackles. Egler punted to Krieser who was dropped by Evans on the 33 as the quarter ended.

Mendota took the ball and on the first play Faber lost two yards before Edwards cut back through tackle to the mid-stripe for a first down.

Weaver stopped Edwards for no gain and a pass from Edwards to Faber failed. Another pass intended for Krieser was almost good but Edwards was forced to punt and Egler was run out of bounds on the Dixon 20.

Dixon began a second scoring threat with three first downs in a row which included a brilliant pass from Egler to Shank and lateral to Quilhot to the 49 yard line. A penalty on Mendota for roughing the kicker gave the Dukes a first down on the Mendota 45 and on a spinner into the line by Quilhot made another first down when Mendota was again penalized 15 yards for unnecessary roughness. This brought the ball to the visitors' 15-yard line but the Dukes missed the necessary yardage in four down only by inches. Five yards were picked up on another pass over the line from Egler to Shank after Dixon had been penalized for backfield in motion.

Edward's Pass Is Good

Mendota took the ball and made a first down in three place which were climaxed by Edwards' pass to Krieser on the Mendota 38.

A line plunge by Edwards and another pass attempted failed and Edwards punted to Loftus who was halted on the Dixon 39.

Quilhot picked up five yards on a spinner through the left side of the line and Dixon lost the same yardage on a penalty for taking too much time in the huddle. Another penalty for back field in motion cost the Dukes another five yards and Dixon was forced to punt as the half ended.

Following the third quarter kickoff the Dukes began a series of two first down which included a 36-yard gain on left end run by Quilhot who was run out of bounds by Faber on the Mendota 30. The ball went from Quilhot to Gilbert on a reverse and the latter made another first down to the Mendota 19 as the Dukes threatened again.

Mendota Holds

However, the visitors' mighty line held and the Dukes could not get beyond the 11-yard line on a series of four down.

Mendota made first down on a pass from Krieser to Faber on the Mendota 35. But on the next three plays they could not gain over about a yard and Edwards punted to Loftus who was stopped in his tracks on the Dixon 33.

Quilhot spun through the left guard for another first down to the Mendota 45 and on two plays—one a left end run by Egler and another spinner by Quilhot the Dukes advanced the ball to the Mendota 35.

Quilhot went through center for five more yards. Dixon was penalized five yards for offside but a pass from Loftus to Shank was good or a first down to the Mendota 12 and the Dukes threatened AGAIN.

Mendota again held and the locals could pick up only nine yards on a series of line plunges which carried them to the Mendota 23 where the ball went over to the Dewitzmen.

Faber made a yard through center and then Edwards swept the right side of the line to the Mendota 30 first a first down as the quarter ended.

A two-yard loss and a five-yard penalty sent Mendota back towards and on fourth down Edwards whipped around the end to the Mendota 30 for a first down.

Fumble Recovered

A recovered fumble and a pass which was almost intercepted didn't advance the Mendota cause

Everyone and his brother got a chance to play in the frosh-soph game last night as the Dixon underclassmen counted a 25 to 18 victory over the Mendota visitors.

Coach Winger used a mixture of players and it was only in the third quarter when all the smaller boys played in sandlot style that the Mendota team could roll but three quick touchdowns. This was because the Dixon mentor was under the impression that it was the last quarter.

The first-stringers went in to save the day in the final stanza.

Touchdowns for Dixon were made by four players. The first was in the opening minute of play when Meinke romped through center for nearly 50 yards on the Dukes' first chance with the ball. His line plunge was stopped in an attempt to add the extra point.

In the same frame Cooper raced around left end for 30 yards and another touchdown, Meinke's attempted pass over the line for the extra point failed.

Second Quarter

In the second quarter Dixon scored again when Alexander let loose on a galloping run down the side of the field for 40 yards. The line plunge for the point failed.

In the third quarter Goff of Dixon took a pass from Frey and romped 18 yards to another score. The line plunge failed.

Then Mendota let loose with three quickies in what seemed like an eternal quarter. Edwards romped around right end for 12 yards on the first one and the pass for the point failed.

Hochstatter passed to Edwards for a gain of 40 yards for the second touchdown and the drop-kick failed. Then Hochstatter ran back the kickoff for a distance of 80 yards for the third score and the line plunge failed.

Dixon's first team went back into the game and held the visitors for the rest of the game.

after more than a week of inaction ascribed to "weather". Possibly the weather was bad, but the British are not likely to pay much attention to it at this critical time. It seems more likely that the ostensible shift was used for a great, general shift in the bomber strength of the British Isles, involving, possibly, a considerable diversion of offensive strength to the Near East, adjacent to Russian borders.

It is very evident that the British are going to put up a real fight, to keep open the Persian supply route to the Russians, certainly with planes; possibly with men and tanks.

parity price as determined by officials here under present laws was 2 cents a pound for wool, he recently sold his crop for 44 cents.

"I'll give any man here a $10 hat if he can show how farmers can make a profit on our present parity price system", the husky Texan said.

The group wound up two days of debate by appointing six men to a subcommittee instructed to draft a new method for determining "parity prices" at higher levels than under the present farm program.

Parity prices presently are designed to give farmers the same purchasing power, in terms of non-farm commodities, that they had during 1909-14.

and Edwards punted to Loftus on the Dixon 43.

Quilhot made six yards on another spinner play and Loftus cut through center for two yards before Quilhot made it first down to the Mendota 46.

Another first down was made when Egler sent around right end for six yards, and then cut across to the left to the Mendota 35.

Driving onward the Dukes went to the 25 on another plunge by Quilhot and a smash by Jovnt. They advanced for another first down when Loftus made three yards through center. Quilhot went off tackle for 2 yards. Egler picked up a yard through right tackle and Quilhot went through left guard to the Mendota 15.

Egler advanced to the 9-yard line on a wide right end sweep and Jovnt pushed the ball to the 2-yard line. And then a Dixon player was called for pushing and the Dukes were sent back 15 yards on a penalty from which they could not recover even though Egler's pass to Shank was good.

Mendota's Edwards passed on second down to Faber who fumbled the ball and it was recovered by Loftus of Dixon on the Mendota 27. But the game ended with the first Dixon down as Quilhot carrying made a yard through tackle.

ium Monday afternoon, Oct. 6, at 2 p. m.

The board and chairman have been working toward a worthwhile project this summer, by serving the Rhinehart Golden Wedding Anniversary dinner, early in the summer. Later they served refreshments for the Pratt stock food demonstration, sponsored a lunch stand through the Fall Festival and on Oct. 21 will serve the banquet for the Northern Illinois Funeral Director's meeting. The club sponsored the motion picture in Franklin this summer.

If enough reservations can be had the trip will be made on October 17. These trips have proven to be very enjoyable. Mrs. Jacobs plans them so there is never a dull moment. Watch these columns for further details.

Mrs. Pearl Dysart, chairman of the Garden committee, reported on the flower show. 861 persons registered and a total of $26.20 was cleared through the selling of plants and chances on a pair of vases.

Mail is Walked Between Chicago and Ft. Wayne

In 1814 there was no postoffice between Chicago and Fort Wayne, Indiana, and the Illinois Writers' Project, W. P. A. reports, a soldier "walked" the mail between the two points, making the trip every 30 days.

At that time there were but nine postoffices throughout Illinois and the report of the postal department for the first half of the year showed total receipts of $143 from the area as contrasted with a delivery cost of $1,002.
